* Emory and UGA Garner Architectural Citations ****

Emory's Cox Computing Hall renovation, designed by Collins Cooper Carusi Architects, Inc. was awarded the Collegiate Citation in American School and University's 14th Annual "2004 Interiors Showcase" competition. The citation is the second-highest honor the publication can award a project. The judging panel's comments complimented Collin Cooper Carusi's Interior Architecture: "A well-orchestrated use of color, lighting and materials. A very dynamic space."

In the same publication, the renovation of Myers Hall at the University of Georgia will also be recognized. The jury awarded the project with an "Outstanding Design" distinction for sensitive design of the facilities common areas and the selection of materials and finishes. Working with the Office of the University Architect, Collins Cooper Carusi Architects was the design architect on the Myers Hall project, teaming with Duckett Design Group, Inc., the architect of record. Also, Myers Hall and its General Contractor, Hogan Construction, LLC were winners in the Atlanta Business Chronicle's 2004 "Best In Construction" Award in the design-bid-build renovation category.

American School and University will publish the 2004 Interior Showcase in August 2004. For more information, visit www.schoolsdesigns.com on the Word Wide Web. For more information on the Best in Construction Award, visit www.atlantabusinesschronicle.com.
